SUBJECT: Governor's Executive Order No. 129 - Sheriffs' Commission and Criminal Justice Commission Waiver or Modification of "Break-in-Service" Rules for Training Courses

Sheriffs, police chiefs, school directors and other criminal justice professionals have expressed concerns about Basic Law Enforcement Training (BLET) courses, Detention Officer Certification Courses (DOCC) and Criminal Justice Instructor Training courses that were underway when the COVID-19 pandemic commenced that caused some courses to be stopped.

The big concern was whether, after a lengthy shutdown, courses would be able to re-open and pick up where they left off, or whether the courses would require cancellation and be required to start over. Various provisions in the North Carolina Administrative Code only allow for brief breaks in instruction before the course would be required to start all over again.

The North Carolina Sheriffs' Education and Training Standards Commission (Sheriffs' Commission) and the North Carolina Criminal Justice Education and Training Standards Commission (Criminal Justice Commission) both had emergency meetings to discuss this critical issue. In order for the two Commissions to be authorized to waive or modify their existing mandatory rules, one option was to ask Governor Roy Cooper to issue an Executive Order granting authority to the two Commissions to waive or modify certain specific administrative rules.

Yesterday, Governor Cooper issued Executive Order No. 129 (copy attached). Executive Order No. 129 authorizes the Sheriffs' Commission to waive or modify the scheduling requirements for the Detention Officer Certification Course (DOCC). It also authorizes the Criminal Justice Commission to waive or modify the scheduling requirements for the Basic Law Enforcement Training (BLET) course and the Criminal Justice Instructor Training course. This authority relates solely to waiving or modifying the rules that prohibit a lengthy break during a course. It does not authorize either Commission to reduce the minimum requirements for successful completion of the courses.

It is important to note that the Executive Order itself does not waive or modify any rules. It merely gives the authority to do so to the two Commissions. The Executive Order is effective for 30 days from April 7th which will give both Commissions an opportunity to consider proposed changes to the relevant rules and to make whatever changes, if any, that the two Commissions deem appropriate.

To submit recommendations regarding the waiver or modification of the rules, send them to:

Sheriffs’ Commission: Director Diane Konopka at dkonopka@ncdoj.gov

Criminal Justice Commission: Director Steven Combs at scombs@ncdoj.gov

The membership of the two Commissions and the entire criminal justice training community are grateful to Governor Cooper for his issuance of Executive Order No. 129. This will enable the two Commissions to consider and implement an appropriate solution for the: (1) Detention Officer Certification Course (DOCC); (2) Basic Law Enforcement Training (BLET) course; and (3) Criminal Justice Instructor Training course.

Thanks…Eddie C.
